Working together,
saving water, saving energy

Before I received the pack from Scottish Water, we were aware of how much water we were using but we didn't do anything specific at home to limit our water use. I thought that because it rains so much, water availability must be good in Scotland. The advice made me realise how much water you can use, even by just having a shower.

Since we've had the pack we've certainly been doing more, and we've been much better at reducing our water usage.

I would not have reduced the amount of time I spend in the shower without the pack.

My showers are now much quicker, and I use the extra time that I save to get on with something else. Plus, our water is heated through a cylinder, so we now have more hot water available because we are using less. So that has made us more energy efficient as we don't heat as much water as we used to. Scottish Water gave me a water efficient shower head, a kitchen tap aerator, a universal plug and a hose gun, and I use all of these to save water.

I found that they were all easy to fit, easy to use and free, so why wouldn't you do it? The shower head is fantastic, it is far better than the one we had previously.

The supporting information in the brochure and leaflet was very influential on my decision to install all these devices. It explained how you could save time, water and made me think about my own behaviours, such as not leaving the tap running when brushing my teeth.

I would never have bought these devices if they weren't provided to me. The devices are so easy to fit, for any age group, so that was all the help we needed.
